President: Islamic Revolution, Materialization of Divine Promise

TEHRAN - President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani said bere on Saturday that the 20-year old Islamic Revolution is the best historical example of the materialization of divine promises and of wonderful development of man and society.

Speaking to foreign dignitaries who attended ceremonies marking the demise anniversary of the Late Imam Khomeini, President Rafsanjani said that the turbulent and eventful years that followed the victory of the 1979 Islamic Revolution can be the basis of research studies by Muslim scholars and the origin of new religious thoughts' and attitudes.

Referring to the fact that the global arrogance has confessed to the rapid progress made by Iran, Rafsanjani said, "all this glory achieved in a short period of time thanks to the Islamic Revolution seems inconceivable and something unexpected for those who thought only laic and secular governments can made such progress.

He said the baseless charges levelled against Iran by the global arrogance was a move taken by it following its defeats in various military and economic areas.

"The global arrogance which always accused Iran of human violations, after seeing the massive participation of people in the presidential election came to realize the futility of this plot. Then it tried to insinuate that people had not voted for the system, leadership and clergymen in a bid to offset its scandalous defeat."

Arabs Must Act Today

The unconditional U.S. support for Israel is gaining amazing momentum, while Israeli influence in the U.S. is becoming alarming not only for the U.S., but for world peace. In its latest move to support the Israeli cause, Washington voted against a UN resolution providing for Israel to pay 1.7 million dollars in damages arising from its shelling of the UN compound at Qana, southern Lebanon, on April 18, 1996.

Israel and the United States voted against the resolution, while 107 countries voted in favor.

The shelling of Qana, which took the lives of 105 Lebanese civilian refugees taking shelter in the compound, occurred during Israel's 17-day Grapes of Wrath operation in South Lebanon against the Hezbollah. According to a UN investigation, the Israeli bombardment of the Qana base was deliberate.

If deliberate shelling of a UN base and the killing of innocent refugees is not terrorism, what is?

The most serious problem the international community faces today is the unilateral interpretation of concepts by big powers. While on one hand, the United States resorts to sanctions diplomacy against other countries, accusing them of sponsoring terrorism, on the other hand, it has become the main sponsor of Israeli state terrorism.

What is meant by terrorism? This is what the world needs to know at this stage.

What is worse, when the UN decides to punish the culprit, Washington blocks the move. Israel has committed a crime against humanity and the United Nations. Therefore, it is natural to ask the culprit to pay for damages it has inflicted upon Earlier, too, the U.S. blocked a UN resolution condemning Israeli shelling of Qana.

The blind U.S. support of Israel stems from the cancerous spread of Israeli influence in all aspects of life in the United States. In other words, it is the U.S. which is taking orders from Israel, not the other way round.

The unconditional U.S. support of Israel should be an eyeopener for Arabs who, in the final analysis, will be the prime target of Israeli expansionism. Unfortunately, Arabs are in hibernation. When they wake up, it will be too late. Arabs must

Iran, Morocco Sign MOU on Scientific Cooperation -

Boroujerdi Confers With Ranking Afghan Officials

Tehran Times Service

TEHRAN - Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister for Asia-Pacific Affairs Alaeddin Boroujerdi met with Afghan high-ranking officials in Afghanistan to discuss latest developments in the war-stricken country and explore ways to cease hostilities.

In his meeting with Afghan President Burhanuddin Rabbani on Thursday, Boroujerdi said that experience has proved that war cannot bring about a solution to Afghan problem and stability should be restored to Afghanistan solely through presence of all parties and tribes in Afghan political structure.

According to IRNA, the Iranian deputy minister also called for resolving of Afghan problem through holding negotiations among all Afghan factions and called on the international community to roll up sleeves and prevent continuation of war in the country.

TEHRAN - President-elect Hojjatoleslam Mohammad Khatami said here on Thursday that great assets of solidarity and friendship resulting from the presidential elections should be preserved.

Hojjatoleslam Khatami, who was addressing scores of the members of his election campaign headquarters round the country at martyr Afrasiabi hall on Thursday, said mission of the headquarters' staff had not yet been over after the elections and they should remain as the trustees of the president serving the system, revolution and people.

He said the seventh presidential elections had born abundant blessings and that he was proud of being trusted by the world's "worthiest" nation, adding that "such an issue makes me feel greater responsibility."

He observed that after the presidential elections, enemies of the Islamic Revolution admitted to the stability and popularity of the Islamic Republic of Iran's system in which people determined their own destiny.

Calling recent elections as the most serious one of its kind at the national level, Hojjatoleslam Kłatami said there had been no such a serious and tough competition among the nominees as was observed during the event.

The president-elect said the contenders entered the campaign with dignity, responsibility and with a pre-declared program with a view to enabling people to choose their favorite candidate.

He observed that the vast turnout of people amongst various social strata, particularly women and the youth, in the elections indicated a firm national will aimed at defending values and striving for elevation of Islamic

He prayed that Almighty would enable him to fulfill the great responsibility entrusted to him by people.

Concluding his remarks, Khatami praised "enthusiastic" public presence in the polling stations, saying that such noble people had turned out in the elections out of sharing a common feeling of responsibility.

According to unconfirmed reports some 3000 Taliban were killed during the recent days of fighting in the north.

The Taliban were themselves to blame for this reversal. Instead of consolidating their gains by handling the newly found allied forces of Gen. Malik, Rashid Dostum's erstwhile comrade-in-arms, they tried to disarm his men who turned against them with vengeance. Leading Arab Daily Lambasts U.S.' Iran Policy

Tehran Times Service

MEHRAN — The editor-in-chief of the daily Al-Hayat Jahad Al-Khazen based in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, editorialized on Iran-U.S. relations and berated U.S. pronouncements affecting Iran and Muslims at large.

He writes in the June 1, 1997 edition of the daily that Washingon's blind support for the Zionist regime is the main cause of continuing antagonism.

Al-Khazen argues that to revamp relations, it is not Iran but the U.S. that should take the first step.

The editorial, rendered into Persian, reads that in the few days that has elapsed since the election of Mohammad Khatami as Iran's president, public discussion has focused on who should take the first step for improvement of relations between Tehran and Wash-

Iran's president-elect has said that prior to any dialogue between the two countries the U.S. should change its policy.

The U.S. administration, on the other hand, insists that prior to any dialogue Iran should change its policy.

As a matter of fact, the election of Mr. Khatami itself signifies a change, because he is a man with the capability to reconcile conflicting stances of theological seminaries and universities.

Khatami's bold and innovative ideas and thoughts have found expression not only in recent days; he has manifested them ever since he chaired the Islamic Center in Hamburg where his ability to talk with Germans and Muslims in modern Islamic language was demonstrated.

Al-Hayat's editor further writes that President-elect Khatami's shining performance as minister of Culture and Islamic Guidance is found in the eye-catching cultural, artistic, cinematic and theater-related movement that blossomed when he was discharging the post.

But the change that has been launched with the election of Mr. Khatami may not be what the U.S. has in mind because the change will, in all likelihood, have a domestic context. (To be Contd.)

China Adds to Maze of Central Asian Project

Tehran Times Service

TEHRAN - China's move to buy a multi-billion dollar stake in a Kazakhstan oil company attaches another direction from the maze of pipeline proposal to export crude from the landlocked riches of Central Asia.

The $3.5 billion pipeline plan attached a 60 percent share in Aktyubinsk Oil Company was thought, according the Financial Times Thursday, to have been "an important factor in swaying the decision in China's favor."

China National Petroleum Corporation best off competition from U.S. and Russian oil companies to secure the 20-year venture at a cost of more than $4 billion with Aktyubinsk, which has estimated reserves of 483 million tons and produces some 2.6 million

Its pipeline plan through Kazakhstan adds to the complex maze of oil export routes from Central Asian proposed by an array

Semnan Exports Over 400 Tons of Goods

Tehran Taxes Service

TEHRAN - Some 440,875 kg of goods were exported from Semnan province during the last Iranian month, April 21-May 21, director general of standard and industrial research of the province Mahmoud Nacemi said Saturday.

He added that the commodities, worth Rls.653.330 million, included sportswear, dried apricot, canned food, tomato sauce, soap, macaroni, and biscuit.

The items were exported to Germany, Central Asian countries and Afghanistan, he said.

transport crude by any other route

He said the port was of high significance because of its immunity from freezing of Volce River in the winter season and that a consignment of 2,000 tons of iron would be loaded for Iran soon after operationing of the Russian part of the port.

He expressed hope that the Iranian contractor would start work on the project soon after conclusion of the related documents and would deliver the dock within a period of nine months.

Olya port has the capacity of hosting up to 4,000-ton ships and of handling 50,000 tons of cargo

In a series of talks held with Russian officials, said the Iranian officials, Iran can contribute to handling eight million tons of cargo vis the port annually.

He underlined that Olya and Astarakhan ports played a highly important role in handling cargo between Iran and Russia and in linking the two countries with the European and Asian markets.

He said that Russia can "transport its cargo to such countries as Pakistan and India with a 33 percent discount via the port and Iran can in return gain an easy access to Russia and Europe.

Madad continued that Iran and Russia had agreed on transit of 140,000 tons of Russian goods via the Caspian Sea and the Iranian territory by the year end on March

He pointed out that a shipping line would be inaugurated between Russian Astarakhan and Olya ports and Iran's northern Nowshahr port through which Iranian and Russian lorries would be capable of carrying cargo to either destination by passing a marine overfly.

He concluded that Iran has called on the Caspian Sea littoral states to aftend a session in Tehran this year to survey variety of subjects within the framework of . their naval cooperation and pertinent to the ships traffic system, fight against contamination and saving lives of the victims.

India for Increase in Software Exports to Iran

Tehran Times Service

TEHRAN - India is looking forward to increasing its exports to Iran in electronics and computer software segments, which in 1996-97 amounted to a mere $1.48 million, according to the Director of Electronics and Computer Software Export Promotion Council (ESC) of India, R.H.

Naqvi told IRNA this morning, "Iran represents an area of interest in ESC's newly evolved strategy to tap markets like Persian Gulf, Africa, Brazil and Canada,"

He added that India's exports to traditional markets like the U.S. was coming down, while the volume of exports to South East Asia, Persian Gulf and Europe was increasing.

Naqvi, however, said that exports worth $1.48 million to Iran represented only a meagre amount in India's total software exports to the tune of $2.54 billion in 1996-97.

More Indian companies than just eight shall have to explore the possibilities in Iran if exports of electronic goods and software items from India are to go up, pointed out Naqvi adding that there was also the need of diversifying the items exported to Iran.

Samtel Electronics, Bharat Electronics, Titen Industries and ET&T Corporation are the major companies involved in software? exports to Iran, while black and white picture tube, toys and a few software instruments comprise the main items of Iran's software and electronics imports from India.

Being at $2.54 billion in 1996-97, India's exports in electronics and computer software segments registered a growth of 34 percent over previous year's $1.9 billion, according to data available with the ESC.

The contribution to electronics and computer software to India's over all exports increased to 7.7 percent from 3.2 percent in

CRICKET Hussain's Double Ton Turns the Screw on

Australia

BIRMINGHAM, England: England tightened their stranglehold on the first test after a record-breaking partnership between Nasser Hussain and Graham Thorpe against Australia at Edghaston here on Friday.

By close of play on the second day, bookmakers were offering odds of 1-12 on England to win the ashes opener with Australia at 50-1. England ran up a massive 331-run lead before rain brought a halt to proceedings an hour and 20 minutes early.

Hussain bit a strinning 207, surpassing his highest first class score of 197 for Essex against Surrey seven years ago, and with Thorpe (138), put on 288 for the fourth wicket as England reached 449 for six.

TENNIS

Kuerten Gobbles Up Dewulf as Grandma Arrives

PARIS: Brazil's Gustavo Kuerten swept into the men's final at the French Open on Friday

The 20-year-old South American, who has won the hearts of the French public with his hard-hitting baseline tennis, eccentric playing kit and indelible smile, defeated plucky Belgian qualifier Filip Dewulf in four sets and then revealed that his grandmother had flown into town.

Kuerten now plays Sergi Bruguera in the final. The 26-year-old Spaniard moved one match away from a third French Open singles crown when he saw off a magnificent challenge from Australia's Patrick Rafter to score a 6-7 (6/8) 6-1, 7-5, 7-6 (7/1) win.

Hitzfeld Quits as Dortmund Coach DORTMUND, Germany: Ottmar Hitzfeld on Friday stepped down as coach of Borussia Dortmund just nine days after guiding them to victory in the European Cup final.

Hitzfeld, who has been at the Rhine Club since 1991, said he was taking up the post of director of sport at the club.

The 48-year-old told a news conference that he had rejected an offer from Spanish giants Real Madrid to stay with Dortmund.

"Real and I were close to an agreement when Borussia made me this offer and seized the opportunity," Hitzfeld said.

Matthaeus Sacked as Bayern Captain MUNICH, Germany: Bayern Munich on Friday stripped Lothar Matthaeus of the club captaincy following the publication of a diary by the former German international in which he criticized his old Bayern teammate Jurgen Klinsmann and national coach Berti Vogts. Bavern said on Friday that Matthaeus was no longer captain "Tollowing a meeting with coach Giovanni Trappatoni".

Barcelona Hope to Cling Onto Ronaldo BARCELONA, Spain: Barcelona President Jose Luis Nunez claims a little-known FIFA rule will force Brazilian star Ronaldo to stay with the Spanish

Nunez says the FIFA rule on transfers means Inter Milan will have to negotiate with Barcelona and cannot simply hope to pay the 32 million dollars written into

"And they haven't said they are willing to negotiate," he said. Inter Milan President Massimo Moratti announced on Thursday he had struck a deal to buy the 20-year-old striker on a three million dollar a year salary until 2006. The striker would get a 14 million dollar signing-on fee.

ATHLETICS

Johnson Pulls Out of U.S. Trials BLOOMINGTON, Indiana: Double Olympic champion Michael Johnson will not compete in next week's U.S. champioriships in Indianapolis, which act as trials for August's world championships in Athens, because of the leg injury he suffered in Sunday's "Fastest Man" showdown with Donovan Bailey. Johnson's agent Brad Hunt confirmed the news on Friday, saying that the decision to withdraw had been taken after a medical examination in Dallas on Thursday. The 400m and 200m champion from Atlanta pulled left quadriceps halfway through his 150-meter showdown with Bailey in Toronto. Johnson's withdrawal means under current rules he cannot now qualify for the U.S. team for Athens.

However, the 29-year-old's coach Clyde Hart said on Friday: "We are not going to campaign for him to be in the team but we hope the rules can be changed."

Christie in Head-to-Head With Bailev SHEFFIELD, England: Linford Christie will meet Olympic champion Donovan Bailey in a 75,000 dollars winner-takes-all challenge over 150 meters in

The race has been arranged because of the huge demand to see Britain's greatest sprinter compete in front of a home crowd in what is expected to be his final season.

Iran Takes Control of Group With

1-0 Victory Over Syria

DAMASCUS, Syria - Ali Daie scored the only goal in the 66th minute Friday, giving Iran a 1-0 victory over Syria and control of Asian Group 2 in World Cup qualifying.

Syria went on the offensive in the first half but was efficiently turned away, setting the stage for Daie's game winner.

The victory improved Iran's record to a perfect 3-0-0 and nine points, sending it to next week's second and final phase of the firstround schedule with a six-point lead over Syria and Kyrgyzstan. Only the first-round group winners advance to the second round.

Kyrgyzstan scored its first victory with a 3-0 victory over Maldives in the second game Friday. Both Syria and Kyrgyzstan have played one less game than Iran, owing to Kyrgyzstan's late arrival in Damascus earlier this week and the postponement of their match. The group is still awaiting FIFA's decision as to whether it will order the game replayed as part of the group's second phase schedule next week in Tehran, or declare Syria the winner by forfeit.

The teams will reassemble in

ingis Looking For Second Slam Title

PARIS - After being the youngest player this century to win her first Grand Slam, Martina Hingis is on the verge of becoming the youngest in history to win her second.

She seeks her second Grand Slam in a row this year in Saturday's French Open final against Iva Majoli. A victory would add her name to an illustrious group of Margaret Court, Steffi Graf and Monica Seles as women who have won the Australian and French

She may lack the power of court, Graf or Seles, but she has an understanding of the game that surpasses all of them at her age.

Hingis won the Australian Open in January to become the youngest Grand Slam winner since 1887, at the age of 16 years, 3 months and 26 days. If she wins Saturday, she will be the youngest winner of two Grand Slams, at barely 16 years, 8 months,

The previous youngest was Lottie Dod, who was 16 years, 10 months when she won her second Wimbledon title in 1888.

Hingis is an overwhelming favorite to win the French Open title over Majoli and take her seventh consecutive tournament and 41st match of the year, including three Hopman Cup victories.

What most people count as the unofficial final for the tournament

- Hingis vs. Seles - took place in the semifinals with Hingis winning in three sets.

Seles, who won the French Open three times, knows why Hingis is unbeaten for the year.

"Martina is really good everywhere," she said, "She doesn't have a weakness that you can say 'OK, if I do that, I'll win the point.' That's why she's so good. She's tough mentally."

Hingis became the youngest No. 1 when she took over from Stetti Gtai in March, passing Se les as the youngest top-ranked player in history.

Majoli has a victory over Hingis last year, one of Hingis's 16 losses in 1996. However the 19-year-old Croatian lost to her three times since, including a 6-1, 6-3 thrashing in Paris indoors in February.

The 19-year-old Croatian thinks it's possible to win again.

"I just think of her as another player," Majoli said. "I know she's great. She's done so much. She's playing great tennis."

Seeded ninth, Majoli could become the lowest seeded woman player in the Open era to win a French Open title.

The thought doesn't faze her. "I really have nothing to lose," she said. "I can really just play the best tennis of my life."

Majoli has been battling a cold

Bulgaria Beat Japan 3-1 in World League Volleyball

HIROSHIMA, Japan — Bulgaria shrugged off a first-set deficit to beat Japan on Saturday, chalking up their fifth win from seven games in Group A of the World League Men's Volleyball Tournament

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah - Karl Malone fired up his Harley Davidson on Friday and didn't stop driving until he'd left tire tracks on the Chicago Bulls' backs.

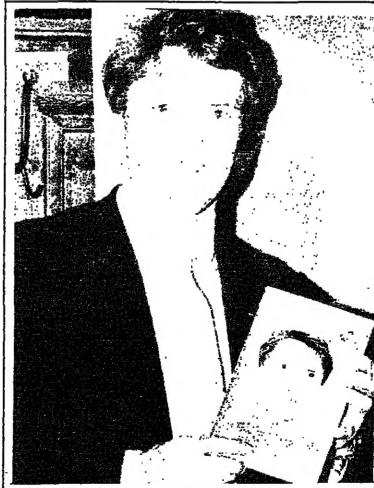

"It's time for the big guys to step up and be more physical," said Malone, who did just that as the Utah Jazz defeated the Chicago Bulls 104-93 in game three of the National Basketball Association finals.

Malone, who missed two key free throws in the two-point defeat in game one and shot abysmally in game two, was the key to the turnaround.

Malone matched his entire game two scoring output of 20 points with 4:43 left in the first half. He scored nine points and grabbed four rebounds in the fourth quarter to help stop Chicago's comeback bid.

"I had two or three Harleys at home and my little son likes them, too," said Malone, a motorcycle enthusiast. "I was going to get on the one that was kind of quiet, and he shook his head and he liked the other one. That's the one I rode."

NIAZOV... development of his country and also the region as a whole. Turkmenistan, like other republics of the Central Asia, is sitting on huge resources of oil and gas but remains almost totally reliant on Moscow for limited use of Russia's pipeline network.

Former senior Communist leader, Niazov has signed trilateral agreements for cooperation in a number of areas with Iran and India and Iran and Azerbaijan.

In 1985, Niazov was appointed Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Republic of Turkmenistan and was also elected first secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the republic, the highest state and party post.

He highlighted the discussions held in the ECO summit for a comprehensive plan to explore possibilities of transportation, telecommunications, energy and a pipeline network for oil and gas. "

"In the beginning (when the Central Asia became independent) such an idea appeared impossible," Niazov said. He talked high about the strategically important geographical situation of the ECO member countries and said these countries can play a crucial role as a gateway between the East and the West for economic and commercial activities.

"God-given wealth such as oil and gas is enormous and this region can rightly boast as being the richest in the world," he said. "Today oil and gas have received priority attention as energy sources for modern economies," he said, stressing that in the 21st century the national economy of the ECO member countries should accordingly go toward this direc-

To this end the ECO heads of government came to Ashkhabad and agreed on the principles for cooperation in various issues regarding creation of a unique energy system, the president noted.

Naturally, transportation requires infrastructure facilities, including pipeline network, and the ECO participants have paid due attention to these issues, Niazov said. Referring to the final declaration, Niazov said the Ashkhabad summit put more emphasis on transportation and pipeline projects. "Bilateral and multinational cooperation in different areas of cooperation between the ECO members was also discussed," he said, adding that the nature of ties among the ECO countries and other regions in a bid to gain access to the world markets was among other important areas discussed by the participants. Niazov said that the participants agreed to give priority to such projects for translating them into practice.

Ashkhabad meeting provided the necessary motivation for the ECO member states to carry out scientific research and studies. According to Niazov the two countries have so far concluded 120 contracts calling for all out bilateral cooperation. On economic cooperation. Iran has invested $250 million in Turkmenistan and the two countries have been cooperating in the delivery of Turkmen and Iranian natural gas to Turkey and Europe. Turkey has signed a preliminary accord with Turkmenistan for the purchase of Turkmen gas through a pipeline via Iran.

He further alluded to the Mashhad-Sarakhs-Tajan railway network saying that world media has called the network the golden chain of the transcontinental links.

He went on saying that the pipeline which continues from Turkmenistan to Iran is one of the world's attractive projects and it is going to be a universally important

Regarding the ample potentials for promotion of regional cooperation within the ECO framework, the two countries of Iran and Turkmenistan can play a crucial role in this regard, Niazov noted.

The cooperation between Iran and Turkmenistan does not and will not be confined to just one particular area, he said and hoped for further promotion of ties in all domains. He listed the areas of reciprocal cooperation between Tehran and Ashkhabad as construction of roads, railroads, dams and electricity plants.

Production of construction materials, heavy industries and metal works as well as manufactured goods are among other grounds suitable for future cooperation between the Islamic Republic of Iran and the Republic of Turkmenistan, Niazov concluded.

the damages "shall be borne only by Israel." That vote produced 58 in favor, two against, and 52 abstentions.

A U.S. official said that the vote constituted "a train wreck, which will be followed by another train wreck in the General Assembly."

The vote is to be validated by a plenary session of the UN General Assembly later this month. The Assembly invariably confirms peace seeking groups strived for ending clashes and removing factors behind tension in order to save their country. He expressed hope that peace and tranquility would be restored in Afghanistan by God's grace.

He said the policy of Afghan party leaders was based on maintaining favorable and good ties with neighboring states. He assured neighboring countries that they would not allow Afghanistan to be turned into the center of tension for regional states, especially for Central Asian republics.

He added that countries' attitides today would lay the basis for future relations between Afghanistan and them.

He continued that Afghans would never forget today's friendship and enmities, calling seriously on the meddling countries not to interfere in Afghan internal affairs.

Boronjerdi expressed satisfaction over ending of clashes in many parts of northern Afghanistan and said that erruption of tension and clashes in the region was the result of the policies which wrongly pointed to settlement of Afghan problems through military means. This is a policy that would not lead to restoration of tranquility in Afghanistan, he added.

Iran's message for Afghan nation is launching all-out efforts for restoration of peace and calm in their country and Iranian people wait for a day to share happiness with Afghans under peaceful, tranquil, and Islamic atmosphere, hoped the Iranian official.

Boroujerdi said that Iran followed the policy of restoration of peace through negotiations and regional security in the region has a special status in that policy.

Palestinians Fragmented by 30 Years of Occupation

BAIT-UL-MOQADDS -- Thirty years' of occupation and a stop-start peace process have left Palestinians more fragmented than ever, living under self-rule, partial self-rule, occupation, amexation and in the dias-

- Even though the West Bank and east Jerusalem were administered by Jordan and the Gaza Strip by Egypt before the six-day war of 1967, Palestinians took it for granted that the land would one day be united.

But Israel's conquest of the territories between June 5 and 10, 1967, and subsequent occupation has left their dream of unity in tatters. The 1993 autonomy accords with Israel have made the situation even worse.

"After all these years living with the dream of liberation, we are disoriented and live in a state of illusion," said Ali Jerbawi, a professor of political science at Bir Zeit University in the West Bank.

"With the signing of the Oslo (antonomy) accord, the Palestinians thought they had obtained something. But they were blinded by illusions because that accord did not achieve their national aspirations," he said.

Between the half-realized promises of freedom and continued occupation in all but name. Palestinian society lives in a state of schizophrenia," Jerbawi told

When the Palestinian Authority installed itself in Gaza in May 1994, thousands of Palestinians lined the streets to welcome the new security forces that gave the new self-rule entity an aura of sovcreignty.

Palestinian general elections in January 1996 reinforced the feeling of euphoria.

But the momentum stopped abruptly with the election of rightwing Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu a year ago, leading to a deadlock in the peace process, and with disillusionment in Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Authority itself.

Since then, the 2.5 million Palestinians in the territories have come to realize that most of them live in cantons, autonomous but separated from each other.

Inhabitants of the Gaza Strip can not travel to the West Bank and vice versa. Most Palestinians can not visit Bait-ul-Moqaddas.

Although Oslo gave Palestini-

West Bank Palestinians are now divided into three areas: autonomous towns labeled "a zones," mixed Palestinian-Israeli controlled regions known as "B zones" and areas under total Israeli occupation called "c Zones."

The new divisions born of the autonomy process came on top of those between the West Bank and east Jerusalem, which was annexed by israel in the 1967 war.

The Palestinians in the holy city became the "Arabs of Jerusalem" in Israeli terminology, whose fate will be negotiated in talks on a final peace settlement, promised in Oslo but already a year late in starting.

Likewise the future of hundreds

Most of the "refugees" that fled the area of present-day Israel during the first Israeli-Arab war in 1948 are dispersed all over the world. Of the six million Palestinians, most live in exile.

Chief Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erakat acknowledged the "difficulties" of the Palestinian situation but said their hopes of national unity remain intact.

"We live in difficult times, both politically and economically. But that's Israel's fault, whereas the Palestinians, for the first time. have begun constructing their state in spite of all the obstacles." Erakat told AFP. "After all these years of occupation and oppression, Israel has not succeeded in eliminating the Palestinian people," Erakat said.

uted in neighbouring Pakistan. Malik has not been heard from since the dramatic reversal of Taleban's brief conquest.

The Taleban governor of the southern city of Kandahar, Mullah Mohammad Akhund, told reporters on Saturday that Malik had taken no part in his followers' revoit against the Taleban.

pect that Malik, if alive, is held prisoner by other Uzbek commanders.

The militia's statement, issued in Kandahar and reported by the Pakistan-based Afghan Islamic Press, also reminded Uzbek commanders that Taleban leaders captured in Mazar-i-Sharif had been invited there for talks and should not be harmed.

The captives include foreign minister Mullah Mohammed Ghous and military chief for the north Mullah Abdul Razzak.

The whirligig sequence of events in the north began when Malik quarrelled with northern warlord General Abdul Rashid Dostum, who was Afghanistan's most powerful anti-Taleban leader.

Malik's forces drove Dostum into exile and brought Mazar-i-Sharif under temporary Taleban control last week, but his Uzbek troops and Shi'ite Muslim militiamen jointly drove Taleban fighters from the city on Wednesday.

Taleban said it had so far conducted only limited air and ground attacks against the opposition in Mazar-i-Sharif, but added that a full-scale military operation might be launched if talks failed.

On Friday, an Uzbek commander named general Humayun Fauzi warned that any ground or air attack on Mazar-i-Sharif could have "dangerous" consequences

Foreign Policy Marks Starting

Positions For Next Elections

WASHINGTON-Contenders in the race to be the first U.S. president of the next century are staking out their positions as they toe the starting line, and foreign policy is Already in the battle to succeed President Bill Clinton in 2000 are vice president Al Gore and house democratic leader Richard Gephardt, who duked it out last week over renewing Beijing's most favored nation trade status.

Gephardt, who rebelled earlier this year by voting against Clinton's budget, opposes the president's decision to maintain normal trade relations with China, whose government he denounced as "a tyramy that debases the dignity of one-fifth of the human race."

Gore delivered a trade address the day of Gephardt's attack, defending Clinton's policy of engagement with China as the only hope of influencing Beijing, sure to be one of the biggest U.S. concerns in the 21st century.

Gephardt, a boyish-looking southern lawmaker like Gore, may next try to distinguish himself from the White House duo by raising questions about the administration's drive to include Chile in a regional trade pact.

Congress is soon to consider "fast track" authority for Chile's membership in the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) joining the United States, Mexico and Canada.

Many democrats fiercely opposed NAFTA, charging it would hurt labor and the environment, and Gephardt intends to raise those issues again, his aide said.

"He doesn't support fast track unless the environment and labor safeguards are factored in," said spokesman Eric Smith, who hinted that Gephardt may also make trouble over Clinton's cherished goal to expand NATO.

The Missouri representative and 1988 White House contender "has concerns on the cost and the reaction of the Russians," Smith, said, adding however that Gephardt generally supports NATO expansion. So far, no one on the Republican side has such clear designs on the White House as Gephardt and Gore, but the favorite target for speculation is the wildly popular former top military chief, Collin Powell.

Like Gephardt, the black general set himself apart by breaking with party members, first backing the affirmative action program for hiring minorities and then supporting the chemical weapons ban.

Other foreign policy issues would likely dominate a Powell platform given his military background, and they may also surface in the expected bids from immigration-foe pat Buchanan and antiNAFTA Ross perot.

With the economy booming and the crime rate dropping, politicians are apparently looking overseas for inspiration.

Political analyst Norman Ornstein said that zeroing in on foreign policy issues may be a good strategy as those areas are credited with the surprising support for Perot and Buchanan.

He also noted that Gephardt has long had a populist protectionist stance, it's his emphasis that's changed.

"As a member of the leadership then he took a less visible role and downplayed his differences with the party," said the American enterprise institute expert. "Now clearly he's not downplaying anything."

"Gephardt is trying to find his sea legs for a possible presidential run and so he's doing the politics he thinks he needs to do," agreed a White House official who declined to be named.

Chirac Breaks Silence Over Election Debacle

LILLE, France - President Jacques Chirac pledged Saturday to work closely with new Socialist Prime Minister Lionel Jospin, but he warned that he would accept no watering-down of his presidential powers.

It was rightwinger Chirac's first public statement since the upset June 1 general election which saw the rout of his coalition government and the arrival in power of a new left-wing government under Jospin.

The two men are sharing power under a political arrangement known in France as cohabitaion.

"Since the last week we have been operating under what we know as cohabitation," Chirac said in a speech to a congress of health care insurers.

"I have already experienced this particular kind of institu1986. I was prime minister.

"I was able then to appreciate the fundamental role played by the president of the republic as the Guardian of French Institutions," he added.

Chirac outlined what he said were his presidential duties in safeguarding domestic and foreign policy priorities and said that he was determined to carry them

In particular, he mentioned social cohesion and the maintainence of republican ideals at home, and European integration, foreign trade and high technology abroad.

Chirac has been widely blasted for making a major political blunder in calling the snap general election in which he was seeking to renew the parliamentary majority of his center-right years of his presidential term.

BAIT-UL-MOQADDAS - Israel denied on Saturday a meeting had been set between Israeli and Palestinian representatives for Sunday (today) in Cairo.

Burundi's Toppled President Leaves U.S. Embassy

BUJUMBURA — Burundi's ousted civilian President Sylvestre Ntibantunganya left the U.S. Embassy in the capital Bujumbura on Saturday after taking refuge there almost a year ago, government officials and witnesses said.

"The decision to allow former President Ntibantunganya to leave the U.S. Embassy...will be in the national interest," said a statement from the presidency.

"Both the government and President Ntibantunganya have contributed a lot to reach the outcome," it added.

Ntibantunganya's freedom immediately underlined Burundi's sharp ethnic divide, with majority ethnic Hutus celebrating but many among the minority Tutsis grumbling about the terms.

On Saturday morning Ntibantunganya, accompanied by the U.S. ambassador, visited the office and residence the government has provided for him in a wealthy surburb of Bujumbura.

Moussa spoke to reporters after Palestinian President Yasser Arafat briefed Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak in Cairo on his latest contacts with the Israelis. He said Arafat had met on Friday with an adviser to Netanyahu.

Egypt has stepped up mediation efforts since a summit between Mubarak and Netanyahu last

The Sunday meeting would centre on "important points connected with the peace process, including settlements", Moussa said, adding that Netanyau's adviser gave Arafat new Israeli ideas to break the deadlock in talks.

He did not name the Israeli adviser or the experts who will take part in the Cairo meeting but said an Egyptian representative would attend as an observer.

Israel-PLO peace talks plunged into crisis in March when Netanyahu launched a new Jewish settlement in Arab East Bait-ul-Mogaddas.

Diplomatic sources said on Friday Egypt and the Palestinians were working on a five-point plan which includes a freeze on any change in the status of Bait-ul-Mogaddas and a ban on Jewish settlement of the West Bank for "a sufficient period".

In return the Palestinians would give a firm commitment to address Israel's security demands, they added.

But Bazak denied reports Israel was willing to halt construction at the East Bait-ul-Moqaddas settlement site which Israel calls Har Homa and Arabs refer to as Jabal abu Ghneim.

Unemployment Rate Sinks to 24-Year Low in May

WASHINGTON — The nation's unemployment rate dropped to 4.8 percent in May, a level last seen a quarter of a century ago.

Wall Street cheered, sending stock prices to record levels despite talk the strong economy will push interest rates up.

After four consecutive monthly declines, the jobless rate is now the lowest since November 1973, the Labor Department said Friday.

"Anyone who wants to work pretty much can, given a modicum level of skills and training," said economist Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pennsylvania.

"That's pretty much across the country, from Boston to San Francisco, and across industries." he said. "Employers are increasingly having a difficult time finding unemployed people who want to

That's not to say that everyone has benefited equally. The May rate was 3.8 percent for adult men and 4.5 percent for adult women. But for teens it was 15.6 percent and for black teens, 33.2 percent. For all blacks, the rate was 10.3 percent, for Hispanics, 7.4 percent, and for whites, 4 percent.

"While there is much to celebrate about the economy, we must work to ensure that everyone shares in this economic prosperity," said Sen. Jeff Bingaman of New Mexico, noting that unemployment in his home state appears stuck at 6.5 percent.

Bond prices initially tumbled in reaction to the report. The fear is that tight labor markets will cause employers to bid up wages and then raise product prices to compensate - and that the Federal Reserve will seek to dampen inflation pressures by raising short-term interest rates. However, Wall Street soon shrugged off the inflation worries, apparently reassured in part by a soothing comment from Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin.

"Everything that I see suggests to me the probability is very high that inflation will remain at low levels," he told reporters.

By midafternoon, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks had advanced 107 points to 7,413, surpassing at least temporarily the record close of 7,383 on May 27.

Demand for bonds pushed the yield on the 30-year treasury bond down to 6.80 percent, from 6.87 percent Thursday.

The May drop in u ment - which wasn't anticipated by most economists - set off a round of happy comments from the Clinton administration.

"America's economy is the strongest it has been in a generation," President Bill Clinton declared in a statement.

Vice President Al Gore, in an interview, said, "It's a(n) ... econ-. omy with unemployment going down to the lowest level since the first OPEC oil crisis."

Both attributed the longevity of the six-year U.S. economic expansion, the second-longest in peacetime history, and the 12.3 million new jobs created since Clinton took office to the administration's success at shrinking the budget deficit from a record $290 billion in 1992 to a projected $80 billion this year.

Republicans, though, claim credit for forcing the administration to agree to balance the budget by 2002.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said payrolls rose modestly in May, by 138,000 jobs, the smallest increase in eight months. However, that followed a large 323,000 gain in April, the largest in 14 months. Much of the May job gains came in services, including recreation, hotels, health care, computer and data processing, trucking, air transportation, finance and real es-

World Bank Could Lend Russia $6bn Over Two Years

Bank announced Friday it could lend as much as $6 billion to Russia under a new two-year country

As a first instalment, it said, six loans worth $884.6 million would be made available to support sectoral economic reforms, as well as to promote improvements in health, education, economic analysis, business restructuring and electricity supply.

"Russia is at the crossroads of its economic reform program," said Johannes Linn, bank vice president for Europe and Central

"We have a tremendous opportunity to help accelerate Russia's economic recovery..."

"As long as the government pushes ahead with accelerated reform efforts, we are prepared to expand our assistance to $6 billion over the next two years.

"These first six loans will firmly lay the first phase of our future financial and advisory assistance to Russia."

The bank in a statement hailed a reduction in Russia's monthly inflation rate to below two percent for the past 12 months, a privatization of productive assets that account for nearly 70 percent of gross domestic product and a trade surplus of $24 billion last year.

It said the most urgent reforms facing Russia were in the administration of the tax authority and in the collection of revenue, along with an expansion of the private sector, a strengthening in the social safety net and the elimination of restrictions on agricultural trade and marketing.

The bank acknowledged that its strategy carried "significant" risks, notably as "economic performance remains fragile and inflationary expectations continue to remain high."

In addition, it warned that "the political credibility of the reform process will be tested in the face of terest groups."

Including the just approved loans totalling nearly $885 million, the World Bank has committed around $7.5 billion to Russia since it joined the institution in

Venezuela Pulls in $2.17 bn in Oilfield Concessions

CARACAS - Venezuela raked in more than $2.17 billion this week from a series of auctions of 20-year concessions for secondary oil recovery on 18 fields.

Union Texas of the United States and Germany's Preussag Energy jointly made the winning bid of $174.7 million Friday for the Boqueron field in eastern Venezuela in the last of 20 auctions this Argentina's Compania General de Combustibles (CGC) and Canada's Carmanah earlier Friday were awarded the concession for the Onado field with 130 million barrels for $90.2 millione.

Two of the fields in the northwestern sector of Lake Maracaibo that were placed on the block elicited no interest and remain in the hands of the state-owned Petroleos de Venezuela (PDVSA) holding company.

The bids for the other 18 fields brought in twice what PDVSA officials had expected, in what executive Vicenzo Paglione said was "a nice surprise for the country."

PDVSA estimates Venezuela's oil output will increase by 500,000 barrels per day from the current three million with the new production from fields in concession.

The fields, rich in light and medium density petroleum, require more investment to make them productive than PDVSA could commit to, company execu-

PDVSA has decided "to make an full effort to develop more attractive fields and combine that production with other types of development, such as these contracts," said Juan Szabo, president of the Venezuelan Oil Corporation, the PDVSA subsidiary handling the concessions.

Winning hidders are required to invest just under $15 million each over three years in the fields, but most have said they would make investments of around 100 million.

Earlier this week Britain's Lasmo won a 20-year contract to run an oil field in northeastern Venezuela for $453 million.

Preussag Energy offered $500,000 for the Cabimas field on the northeastern shore of Lake Maracaibo and a pan-Canadian Petroleum/Pennzoil exploration production consortium offered $1.3 million in the only bid for a third 20-year contract.

EU, Unions, Employers Reach Deal on Part-Time Work

BRUSSELS - European Union officials, labor and employers groups on Friday formally endorsed a deal on rules to guarantee rights to part-time workers, which was initialled by representatives of workers and employers on May 14.

"By facilitating access to parttime work, this agreement constitutes a major step towards greater flexibility of work," the head of the EU Employers' Confederation UNICE, François Perigot, said in Perigot added that flexibility was fundamental to improving the competitiveness of European businesses and creating jobs.

The voluntary agreement, which seeks to encourage parttime work by giving part-time workers the same rights as their full-time colleagues, was formally approved at a meeting in The Hague between the European Commission, the Dutch Presidency and the heads of UNICE. the trade union group ETUC and the public employers group CEEP.

EU governments will now be asked to approve the seven-clause deal, which commits them to removing discrimination and other obstacles facing workers with a part-time contract.

The accord does not cover people doing other atypical types of work, such as temporary or seasonal jobs, or working from home. but it recognizes the need to broker a similar arrangement for these people. The accord allows employers not to give the same benefits to casual workers, but only so long as there are objective reasons for doing so, and prevents them sacking full-timers who refuse to switch to part-time work.

The trades unions and employers' groups - the so-called social partners - agreed in June 1996 to open talks on rights for part-time workers after the European Commission asked them to consider ways of ensuring that employees in a broad range of flexible jobs did not face discrimination.

Friday's agreement is the second piece of legislation to be worked out under the Maastricht Treaty's social protocol, which gives the social partners the right to strike a deal and then ask the council of ministers to turn it into

Clairvoyants Take a Peek at Secretive Swiss Banks

GENEVA — Ever wondered how to catch sight of the secret, numbered Swiss bank accounts of fallen dictators like Zaire's Mobutu Sese Seko or the Philippines' Ferdinand Marcos? Forget conventional means, for the vaults of secretive Swiss banks are out of reach of prying over the Zodiac signs on her desk. Arlenne offered the assurance: "The money is here. If people ask me, I can locate it

But another Swiss growth industry provided some otherworldly answers - at an international exhibition of mediums and clairvoyants last month in Geneva, home to the nation's richest private banks and more than 500 soothsayers.

Clairvoyants said they could lay open the bank vaults and take a peek, albeit with the help of cards, pendulums, tarots and sometimes even just by gazing deeply into the client's eyes.

At times, it seemed only those endowed with supernatural powers could hope to unravel the labyrinths of the Swiss banks. "I see money in the direction of Lausanne. I see a bank facing Lake Geneva. Inside, I see red carpets and worried bankers," intoned Arlenne, asked about the whereabouts of Mobutu's millions.

U.S. Congress Grants Mother Teresa Gold Medal

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Congress on Thursday awarded Mother Teresa of Calcutta the highest civilian distinction at a ceremony witnessed by several hundred lawmakers.

life and times of the deposed Zairean dictator, but little as alarming as that revealed through the mystical powers of the tarot cards of Madame Marina on the relationship between Mobutu and Swiss banks.

The first two tarot cards pulled by this correspondent for Mobutu's lot in life were money and war.

But the third, slapped down triumphantly by Madame Marina, put Mobutu well and truly beyond the pale: the image of the devil.

Madame Marina, a wry and sprightly 80-year-old Polish refugee, had more shocks in store. The tarot cards for the Swiss banks likewise had disturbing revelations.

After two cards denoting power and wealth, she turned over the image of the victim, the man hanging from a tree.

Could it be that Swiss banks will get their fingers burnt in another legal wrangle as Mobutu struggles to keep his hands on his assets, like the court battles raging over Marcos's millions?

California's Marijuana Clubs Remain Outlaws Despite 'Legalization'

SAN FRANCISCO - The strains of Sitar music mingle with the smoke of the cannabis cultivators cooperative, a '60sstyle bistro where the menu lists eight grades of "top quality" marijuana.

A glass counter displays the best sellers: marijuana-filled brownies, peanut butter cookies, "merry pills," Ronrico rum bottles and glossy red-and-green boxes bearing the club's Phoenix and Amigo brands.

"We call it the pharmsceutical night club," said Tracy Williams, 30, who is paralyzed and often travels nearly 60 miles (95 kilometers) from his Santa Cruz home for the drug he smokes to ease his muscle

Since California legalized medical marijuana in November, the state's marijuana clubs have evolved from black market drug dens to bona fide cannabis retailers. They pay taxes, take bank cards and register patients.

But the state's ill-defined medical marijuana statute still makes outlaws of buyers clubs. Patients, who come in wheelchairs, on canes and bearing the purple kaposi's sarcoma marks of AIDS sufferers, risk arrest daily in the effort to ease their pain. "I've known two people who have been busted in the last few weeks," said San Franciscan Jay Segal, 48, who smokes marijuana to relieve the sideeffects of AIDS drugs. "The funny thing is that the rightwingers all say marijuana leads to crime. Look around you - a lot of stoners (marijuana users) laying on couches. This is crime?"

At least a dozen clubs have opened in California. But the law's silence on key questions has led to varying enforcement from city to city, arrests of patients, federal agents threatening doctors, black market deals between growers and buyers clubs and the federal raid of a San Francisco club.

The November citizen referendum, Proposition 215, as of January 1 legalized marijuana possession by anyone with a doctor's recommendation. But transporting it - even to the user's home — remains illegal.

Authorities are grappling with such unanswered questions as whether smoking in clubs violates state anti-smoking statutes, whether cultivating the drug off of club grounds remains a felony and whether sales between grower and club are Even clubs that comply with a conservative interpretation of the law hy growing their supplies on site break the law by buying black-market seeds, according to state and federal authorities.

Helen, 79, who asked that her last name not be used, risks a prison term each time she carries a bag of low-grade marijuana on the two-hour drive from the San Francisco club to her home in Sacramento. The marijuana cookies she bakes allow her 79year-old husband, Norman, to sleep through the pain of a condition that leaves nerves exposed.

"At least he sleeps," she said, standing out in her neatly pressed suit near a shirtless man with a necklace of cannabis leaves. "I don't care what the federal government says, it has helped this man."

Downstairs, club manager Dennis Peron talked to an intermediary about taking on a new supplier for the 40 pounds (18 kilograms) of marijuana the club's nearly 4,000 members go through each week. Asked if such deals are legal, he shrugged.

Prosecutors in each region are making up the law as they go along, creating a policies in one city that are often forbidden in the next.

In San Francisco, nearly everything goes. In San Jose, one of the city's two new pharmacylike buyers clubs was closed under a zoning law. Prosecutors say state law bans smoking at the remaining site. And Santa Clara County considers transportation of marijuana illegal.

The difference between local views on the law pales in comparison to the gulf between local, state and federal officials. State Attorney General Dan Lungren and Sacramento authorities say clubs don't qualify as the "primary caregivers" the law permits to cultivate the drug.

IMAM Hossein IBN ALI (AS) PART 24

hey held an emergency meeting to discuss the mounting tension in Kufa and the responsibility they should take vis-a-vis the change in the government, after Yazid bin Mu'awiyah had taken the affairs of the ummah into his own hands. Sulaiman bin Sird al-Khuza'i, at whose house the meeting was held, delivered a speech. He informed the gathering of Imam Hossein's (AS) announcement of his opposition to Yazid and that he rejected him as a legitimate caliph. He told them that Imam Hossein (AS) was in Mecca, and since they were his followers and helpers they had to do something. If they were able to support and back him, sparing no effort in doing that, they had to inform him of their position. But were they unable to live up to their principles, it would be most incorrect to write to him and then fail him when the best comes to

The Shi'ites who were present at the meeting declared their full support to the Imam. They would defend him by any means available. "We fight his enemy and kill ourself defending him,"

After reaching a consensus on this point, the leading men of Kufa wrote a letter in which they declared their total and final rejection of the Ummayyed rule and that they knew no substitute for Imam Hossein (AS). Then letters poured in from Kufa carrying the urgent call of the Kufans for Imam Hossein (AS) to join them, to take office as the caliphate and Imam of the Muslims. The wave of support for Imam Hossein (AS) was so massive that a list of the tribes waiting for his arrival, totalling 100,000 fighters, was

After studying these letters, Imam Hossein (AS) concluded that it was necessary to send an envoy to Kufa authorized to take the pledge of allegiance from the people of Iraq, on his behalf, and campaign for the sake of rallying the people around Ahlul-Bailt , represented at the time by Imam Hossein (AS).

Imam Hossein chose his counsin, Muslim bin Aqeel, for this mission. The man was known for his piety, courage, and high qualifications in thought and leadership. He would be able to steer the wave of enthusiasm for the interest of the faith.

With him, Imam Hossein (AS) dispatched a special letter to the ole there, and particularly their chiefs. He explianed the qualifications of his envoy, and the nature of his mission. He was to closely examine the situation and describe precisely what was going on there.

Following is the full text of the letter:

"In the Name of Allah, the Beneficient, the Merciful... From Hossein bin Ali,

To the leaders of the believers and the Muslims.

Hani and Sa'id have brought me your letters; they are the last two of your messengers who have come to me. I have understood eveything which you have described and mentioned. The essen tial statement of the majority of you is We have no Imam Therefore come; through you, may Allah unite us under truth and guidance'. I am sending you my brother, Muslim bin Aqeel, who is my cousin and trustworthy representative from my house. ordered him to write to me about your conditions, affairs and views. If he writes to me that the opinion of your leaders and of the men of wisdom and merit among you is united in the same way as the messengers who have come to me have described, and as I have read in your letters, I will come to you at once, Allah willing. By my life, what is the Imam except one who professes the religion of truth, and one who dedicates himself to the essence of Allah, and Salam."

Kufa welcomed Muslim as any loyal and dutiful following would. The pledge of allegiance was taken for Imam Hossein (AS). Ibn Aqeeni, by now, was convinced that the change was on behalf of Ahlul-Bait (AS) and the Message of Allah, the exalted. It was by no means smething common and could not be ignored. It was a truth, tangible and subjective. They should quickly deal with the situation before something happens and spoils the situation.

And so Muslim, may Allah be pleased with him, saw it fit to dispatch an account to Imam Hossein (AS) about the direction of the de facto situation. In his account he called him to come to

"Certainly, the man sent by a caravan in a desert to explore the way ahead of it will never lie to those who had sent him. All the people of Kufa are with you. Eighteen thousand of them have given their pledge of allegiance to me. So make haste and come to us as soon as you read this letter of mine. And peace and the blessings of Alah be on you."

"This is the first time there is a large coordinated study on air pollution effects on mortality whereby we combined 12 cities using exactly the same protocols and confirm the conclusions that have been reported for single cities," Katsouyanni said in a telephone interview.

There is a measurable effect of relatively high air pollution levels on mortality, which is a very important effect."

But Katsouyanni said the "relatively high" pollution levels are really not high and are well below.

The researchers studied data from Athens, Barcelons, Bratislava, Cracow, Cologne, Lodz, London, Lyons, Milan, Paris, Poznan and Wrocław, covering over 23 million people.

Katsonyanni said countries are currently reassessing the accepted levels for air pollution, and pollution has declined from peak levels of the late 1950s and 60s.

But now the mixes and sources of air pollution have changed and it is still not known if the new levels, although lower, are more toxic. Scientists have only started to study the new mixes and levels in the last decade, she added.

1 in 5 Takes Aspirin to Prevent Heart Attacks

ATLANTA - U.S. health officials said on Thursday that at least one in five older adults takes aspirin daily to reduce the risk of a beart attack, even though the overall health benefits of doing so are questionable.

The centers for disease control and prevention said surveys in two states of 1,685 people aged 45 and over found that 23.3 percent were taking aspirin to reduce their chances of a heart attack or stroke. The percentage who took aspirin daily or every other day increased with age, rising to one in three among those 75 and older.

A federal task force recommended in 1989 that men aged 40 and above consider taking aspirin regularly. It said aspirin could cut the risk of a heart attack in half for healthy men with no history of cardiovascular disease.

But the same task force said last year that aspirin's value in preventing heart attacks might be outweighed by its long-term side effects such as gastrointestinal ulcers, hemorrhagic stroke or sudden death.

Researchers learned in the late 1980s that regular use of aspirin lowered the risk of heart attacks and non-fatal strokes in people with cardiovascular disease, which causes about 40 percent of all deaths in the United States.

The CDC's estimates of aspirin usage were based on a telephone survey of 548 Wisconsin adults in 1991 and 1,137 michigan adults in 1994.

We Will Do a Good Job, German Leader Tells Blair

BONN - British Prime Minister Tony Blair and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl pledged to strengthen relations between the two countries and work together for the success of the European Union summit and other uncoming international gatherings.

"I'm sure, prime minister, we will do a very good job," the chancellor told Blair before they went into the talks, which lasted some two hours and had been expected to concentrate on European issues. No statement was issued or planned after the talks ended, officials said.

It was the British premier's first official visit hosted by a foreign government, but not the first time he has held direct talks with Kohl - be got the red carpet treatment in Bonn a year ago when he was leader of a Labour Party in opposition.

Kohl said he appreciated that Blair had come to Germany for this first official visit, taking it as a sign of his desire - which the chancellor said he shared - to ensure that relations between their countries "continue" to be very warm".

For Germany, it is of "fundamental importance": that the two countries continue along the same road together as they had over the past 40 years, Kohl said.

"We are standing in the middle of dramatic change in the world and in Europe," the chancellor in a few days, he recalled, they would have to negotiate and sign a revision of the Maastricht Treaty at the European summit in Amsterdam of June 16 and 17, followed by a meeting of the group of eight countries in Denver and then the special NATO enlargement summit in Madrid in

"Many people in Eastern and Southeastern Europe are looking up to us at this moment," Kohl said, referring to the hopes of such countries to join the EU and NATO, "because for long we told them if communism was overcome they would be welcome in Europe."

It was the will of the German government and people to go ahead together on this path with all its partners, and in particular with Britain, he said.

"I'm sure, prime minister, we will do a very good job," the chancellor told Blair. He was equally sure those that expected them not to would be disappointed,

Blair said: "I want to see warm and strong relations between Britain and Germany. I believe that is in the interests of our two countries, in the interests of Europe and of the wider world."

It was important to recognize they faced common economic and political challenges. "In particular it is obviously important that we get a successful conclusion to the intergovernmental conference at Amsterdam. We will be working hard for that."

Blair agreed with Kohl it was "tremendously important" to widen Europe to East European countries. "It is vitally important for peace and stability in the world," he said.

In an article for the popular German daily Bild coinciding with the visit, Blair called for better relations with Germany and "a people's Europe": He wrote "I want to change the relationship between our two countries decisively for the better."

Blair accepted there would be areas of disagreement - "like who should host the world cup in 2006, for example!" - but what

He said he had asked other EU leaders to understand that because of our history and agreement currently under discussion must recognize that we keep our own border and immigration controls".

But above all, he wanted a "new approach to Europe", as too often people felt remote from what European leaders were doing or saying.

"That must change. We must emphasize the real people's agenda - jobs, crime, environmental protection, security. These are the people's priorities. We must build a people's Europe."

mattered was "to be able to debate serious issues in a serious and friendly way," he wrote.

Horn Calls For Socialist Unity ahead of Elections

BUDAPEST - The success of Hungary's economic stabilization was likely to help the Socialist Party (MSZP) repeat its 1994 election victory next year, Prime Minister Gyula Horn said.

Horn, president of the senior government party MSZP, said in his opening speech at a party Congress that an austerity program launched in 1995 led the economy to sustainable growth the first time in almost thirty years.

"The rate of (economic growth) will reach the average of the European Union already in 1997," he said.

The 1995 program, while it had cut the soaring budget and current account deficits, also led to a 17 percent fall in real wages, knocking the socialists to third place in opinion polls behind two opposition parties.

Horn cracked down hard in his speech on both his leftist critics within the party and right-wing opposition parties which denounce the socialist-liberal rule for opening a wide schism between the rich and the poor.

"Hard as it may be, we have to make people realize that the road chosen after 1989 - the first stage of market economy - is not determined by morality, but by the accumulation of capital," Horn

The fact that Hungary was likely to begin talks on joining the NATO in September and on European Union membership in January 1998, was also a credit to the government, Horn said.

Horn called for unity within the party ahead of the elections, saying the first and most difficult stage of transition into a market economy was over but MSZP had yet to convince Hungarians that future welfare demanded further efforts.

"The society must be prepared that its future will be much easier but the fight is far from over," he said, adding however, that the government did not plan any measures to speed up economic growth artificially.

Hungary expects its gross domestic product to rise at an increasing pace of two to five percent on the next five years.

The next general elections are likely to be held in May 1998.

join the European Union. The Socialist Party (PSS) which is one of the four governing parties, called for the vote to assess support for a ban on arms exports. With the support of the Greens and of religious and pacifist groups, the PSS wants to ban the export of war material and of material which can be put to both military and civilian use. The voters will also be asked to say if they consider a national referendum to be necessary prior to any opening of negotiations to take Switzerland into the European Union.

On the arms issue, the government had proposed two laws to tighten controls on sales but they were drastically watered down in Parliament under pressure from the arms industry

The trade unions are torn between supporting a ban on ethical grounds and opposing it to protect jobs. The number of jobs under threat if a ban goes into effect is generally put at 5,000 but according to some economic experts, up to 120,000 people could be affected in 3,000 firms.

In particular, the renowned Swiss multi-function pocket knife would fall into the category of material suited for both civilian and military use.

Those who support a ban point out that in any case the arms industry is in recession with thousands of jobs already lost and conversion to civilian production

Arms exports accont for only 0.23 percent of the country's exports and 1.0 percent of the world's total arms trade.

In 1996, Switzerland sold arms worth 233 million Swiss francs ($165 million). Customers included Oman, Germany, the United States, Austria and France.

The Lausanne weekly magazine L'Mustre noted that barning arms exports would be a way for Switzerland to "refurbish its image tarnished by the revelations about its materialistic and opportunistic attitude during the war" - an allusion to its financial ties with Nazi Germany.

In 1972, a similar referendum saw the majority of voters reject a ban on arms exports. But this time the vote takes place in a period of recession and amid a decline in the country's moral standing in the world.

The other big question all voters will be asked to answer is whether the government must be required to consult the people and the cantons before opening talks on EU membership.

On December 6 1992, the Swiss voted against being part of the European economic area. Support for Europe has grown since then but inspite of this, talks on a straightforward bilateral accord with the EU have been

In 17 cantons, voters will be consulted on almost 40 other matters of mainly local interest.

In Valais, voters will be asked if their canton should provide financial guarantee to the town of Sion which is seeking to host the winter olympics in 2006. (AFP)

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone -Faced with military threats, a workers' boycott and global condemnation, coup leaders Friday showed signs of weakening by asking the international community to bring the crisis to an 'amicable settlement."

The statement on state-run radio was an indication that 12 days after their ouster of Sierra Leone's civilian government, the embattled forces of Maj. Johnny Paul Koroma were tiring.

On Thursday, they admitted they lacked the firepower to win another clash with Nigerian forces who bombarded the capital Monday. They offered a partial compromise, saying ousted President Ahmed Tejan Kabbah could return - but not as president - if Nigeria agreed to release Foday Sankoh, a rebel leader whom Koroma has invited to help run the country. Sankoh is under arrest in Nigeria on gun-running charges.

Mutinous soldiers launched the coup with a May 25 prison break, releasing Koroma and 700 hardened criminals. Koroma said he staged the coup to preserve a peace accord with Sankoh's Revolutionary United Front, which waged a six-year civil war that ended in November.

He accused Kabbah of dividing the country along tribal lines and causing the November peace accord to collapse.

On Friday, Koroma's ruling armed forces Revolutionary Council proclaimed its "willingness to negotiate" and said it was "appealing to the international

The Nigerian commander of the West African Peacekeeping Force, Maj. Gen. Victor Malu, described Monday's fighting -

"skirmishes." The real operation to flush out Koroma has yet to begin, he warned.

Koroma responded by mounting machine guns at the campus of Fourah Bay College, on a hill overlooking the city. Lecturers there spotted troops cleaning out World War II bunkers and settling in for a fight.

The standoff has crippled Freetows, Sierra Leone's once lively seaside capital. Workers have refused coup leaders' appeals to return to their jobs, prompting warnings Friday of mass firings if they did not comply by Monday.

"With the supply of surplus labor in the country, replacement can be easily secured," they warned in a radio statement.

Long lines have been forming at a handful of shops that open daily for a few hours to sell food and other necessities. The majority of stores and businesses remain closed, however, as do banks, making it impossible for most people to go shopping.

Renegade soldiers Roam Freetown's streets, harassing drivers, looting houses, and taking over abandoned luxury hotels.

Circus on Tightrope But Russian Kids Still Love It

IVANOVO, Russia - She flies through the air with the greatest of ease, but little Sveta, the 11year-old baby of the Marchenko troupe, must work on her act if she is to make a career in the hard-up Russian circus.

Sveta wants to perform on the trapeze when she outgrows her lacy pink froufrou and, more importantly, gets too heavy for the elder Marchenkos to bounce her high into the air on the soles of their feet in their act's finale.

"It's a great shame. The circus is the best place to have fun."

Those people who do still manage to come, seem to agree.

"These days there are a lot of artists competing for jobs and there's not much money in Russian circus. You have to be adaptable."

Lyudmila Marchenko, who runs the troupe with her husband Oleg, says Sveta has been encouraged to learn a whole range of other disciplines during three years on the road.

"These days there are a lot of artists competing for jobs and there's not much money in Russian circus. You have to be adaptable," Lyudmila said backstage after a performance in Ivanovo, a depressed industrial city northeast of Moscow.

The theater is one of dozens of purpose-built big tops scattered around Russia by Soviet leaders anxious to distract a circus-loving nation from the dreariness of everyday life.

Backstage it swarms with a menagerie of bears, tigers. horses, chickens, a llama and much else. A juggler calmly practises in a corner as the clowns, puffing fiercely on their cigarettes, work out no on their routine. Out front, the band raucously accompanies every act, the spotlight picks out a slender girl turning somersaults on the high wire and several hundred youngsters, sticky buns and ice cream in hand, are having the time of their lives. It is a sign of the times, however, that Sveta has spent half her brief career abroad, where the skills of the Russian circus draw in much bigger-money crowds than the 500 or so people who paid $2 each for the midweek show in Ivanovo.

"We played to 80 full houses in Paris last year. Here people just don't have the money," grumbled Yuri, pausing to thump one of his agitated performing bears. "Sometimes I wonder why we bother performing at all here. But we're a state troupe. We have to work. And at least the animals get to eat."

Russians' Appetite for Escapist Fun Undimmed

Alexei Yudin, director of the Ivanovo circus, one of 43 owned by the government's Rosgostsirkh (Russian state circus) Corporation, says the hardest part is keeping up the crumbling strucsters to see every touring show in town - meaning a trip to the circus every month or two.

"It's much better than television," reckoned Ashot Sokhikyan, whose wide-eyed four-yearold daughter Zina is an avid fan of the animal acts and the clowns.

"People forget what it's like but here they remember what it means to have atmosphere," said clown Adam, with an earnest maturity belying his 18 years and the fact he makes a living walking round with a live chicken on his head.

Few Western children would expect to see the circus more than once or twice a year, but Roshere?" he says, totally serious. At least, though he complains bitterly about the paltry receipts in Russia, he does not face the same questions about the animals' welfare. It is simply not an issue here.

"What else would we come to the circus for?" said one puzzled young mother in the audience, when asked if the circus might be better without the captive big cats. "The circus is the animals."

For all its money problems, a devoted and discerning public, modest but permanent state support and a steady flow of young new performers should see Russian circus into the next century.

"We are all going through hardships, the circus no less than the rest of Russia. When people don't get paid, they don't go to the circus. But though we have our troubles we have successes too," said Galina Kirin, an official at Rosgostsirk in Moscow.

In Ivanovo, tumbling coach Lyudmila Marchenko was equally sanguine after a life spent under the big top: "As long as youngsters like Sveta learn the gostsirk ensures that its 10,000odd state-employed artists are constantly touring its venues in Russia as well as starring in shows abroad.

"We change the show all the time. The idea is to get people to come to the circus every month," Yudin said.

Non-afficionados might carp that one tightrope walker or juggler is much like another. But the real draw tends to be the animals. "Last month it was sea lions," Yudin said. "This month, it's tigers. They're generally the main attraction."

Animals Still Biggest Draw in Russia

That emphasis on animals has seen circuses in the West come under criticism from animal welfare groups.

It is an experience that annoys Vladimir Shevchenko, tiger trainer and leader of the troupe on tour at Ivanovo.

"Our animals are perfectly healthy. If they weren't happy they wouldn't reproduce would they?" he said, still tense as he wound down in his dressing room after another night's work making tigers ride on horseback and lions roar with rage.

The tension is perhaps justifiable. He spent a week in hospital in March after a lion took a bite out of his leg.

World Bank SEEKS END TO LEAD IN GASOLINE

Worldwide

WASHINGTON - The World Bank on Thursday urged all countries to phase out the use of lead in gasoline within the next five years in a call to action ahead of the United Nations Earth Summit later this month.

World leaders are set to gather at the United Nations on June 23 to discuss progress on dealing with issues such as air pollution, water conservation and wildlife protections.

"We are concerned that progress in the five years since the Rio summit has been inadequate and that there's a serious risk of loss of momentum and retreat indeed from the (summit's) goals," said Caio Koch-Weser, the World Bank's managing director of operations.

Pollution was still getting worse in many major cities, and forests and wildlife habitats were being lost at the same rate as before Rio, he said.

World Bank officials said leaded gasoline could easily be phased out to help curb air pollution and health problems. Lead is believed to cause neurological damage and heart disease among children. In the five years since the Rio summit, lead use in gasoline in Latin America has fallen by twothirds, and in Bangkok, Thailand it was phased out in less than three years.

"in other parts of the world we've not seen that, and we really do believe this is one of those actions that could be taken today," said Andrew Steer, director of the World Bank's Environment Department.

The World Bank said it was ready to help governments introduce programs to switch to unleaded gasoline, a conversion that it said would result in big savings in health care and other spending in the long run.

Koch-Weser said governments should take more steps to eliminate the use of ozone-depleting chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs), and build a global carbon emissions market to stem climate change. The World Bank said it was ready to create a "carbon offset fund" that would help countries meet their obligations to trim carbon emissions after 2000 under a climate agreement that is to be negotiated in Kyodo, Japan in December.

The fund would sell carbon credits to companies such as utilities in industrialized countries, then use the money on projects in developing countries to trim energy use and cut carbon emis-SIORS.

The World Bank called for governments to start treating water as "a precious, economic resource," instead of encouraging waste through subsidies to cities and farm areas.

It also urged governments to start making cities more livable, stop subsidizing the use of natural resources, take more steps to preserve key habitats on land and in the oceans, and work with industries to adopt greener prac-

Egypt to Make First Foray into Space

CAIRO — Egypt is developing a space drill, named after an ancient god, which will be used on the Russian exploration craft Marsokhod to find out if there is life on Mars.

"I think we will call the drill Kheper (the pharaonic name for Scarab), god of ancient Egypt, a symbol of eternity and good luck," said Mossalem Shaltut, of the National Research Institute of Astronomy and Geophysics in

The Egyptian Ministry of Scientific Research signed an agreement with the California-based Planetary Society in September and with the Russian Institute of Space Research, Shaltut said. Under the agreement Egypt will design and make a space drill estimated to cost $3 million and to be used on a flight scheduled for 2001; he added.

"A.five-kilogram (11-pound) prototype will be tested in Al-Oweinat, in the western desert. on the border with Sudan and Libya," Shaltut said.

"The nature of the ground there is like the one on Mars. Like Mars there are also sand storms and arid valleys there," he added.

Shaltut said information obtained to date from Mars probes indicate that there is water under a layer of ice which in turn is covered by sand, small rocks and limestone.

"The space probe can drill three to four meters down to remove a sample of water. The American space probes Viking 1 1975 were only able to dig 10 centimeters deep and could not reach water level," Shaltut said.

Shaltut said this would be the first time water samples have been taken to determine if there is life on Mars.

"The drill will be put in the Marsokhod, a Russian spacecraft and the equipment will take off from Cape Canaveral in 2001," Shaltut said. He said he hoped the success of this project will pave the way for the creation of an Egyptian space agency to help built telecommunications satellites instead of buying them from abroad.

"Egypt has had since 1963 an astronomic observatory, one of the world's largest reflector-telescopes which has a 74-inch diameter ... and helped in 1930 in the discovery of Pluto," he said. A space agency would help bring back home 80 percent of Egyptian satellite experts who are currently working in Europe or the United States and bolster national security in the face of Israeli satellites, he added. The Planetary Society, with which Egypt signed the agreement to develop the drill, is a non-government space organization which claims 100,000 members across the world. It works closely with Russian, French and U.S. space agencies to test explorations on Mars. The society has conducted tests on the Russian space robot and has co-sponsored with the United Nations and the European Space Agency workshops in several developing nations such as Egypt, Pakistan and Mexico.

Polish Centrists Reject Pact With Left or Right

WARSAW — The chief of Poland's centrist Union for Freedom (UW) party rejected the possibility of a coalition with either the ruling ex-communists or the powerful right-leaning opposition led by the solidarity

"These groupings are very similar conglomerates, which merely have different names. It is hard to say which of these two would be worse for Poland," UW leader Leszek Balcerowicz said in comments quoted by PAP news

Parliamentary elections due around September are likely to be dominated by the democratic left alliance (SLD) of former communists and their bitter foes, the rightist solidarity election action (AWS). Opinion polls suggest that they may each gain about one third of parliamentary seats, meaning that smaller parties like the UW could be crucial to forming a governing coalition.

The UW includes many of the intellectuals who were behind the pre-1989 opposition to communist rule and then formed the first democratic governments.

As Finance Minister, Balcerowicz steered through radical shock-therapy reforms widely credited with laying the foundations for Poland's present economic growth.

The ex-communists would love to lure the UW into a coalition to help them to shed the stigma of their origins in the repressive old

But Balcerowicz spurned their approaches, rejecting their suggestions that the UW had many policies in common with them. "The SLD is trying to attach itself to us and offer its cheek for a kiss," PAP quoted him as telling students in the southern city of Katowice. "But in practice huge differences divide us, in policies and regarding our will to pursue reforms." Some supporters of the AWS would also like a coalition with the UW to reassure voters that the union-led alliance, which has some radical populist factions, would pursue market reforms. But Balcerowicz is also contemptuous of the AWS, which includes estranged former allies, and he savaged its election program as incoherent when it was announced last month,

While the UW's tactics allow it. to keep its principles pure, critics wonder if it has any future on its own. Its famous names, heroes of the democracy movement such as Tadeusz Mazowiecki and Jacek Kuron, are fading from politics.

Mazowiecki, the first democratically-elected prime minister after 1989, may not stand in the elections and Kuron, Poland's most popular politician, has had some health problems and has kept a low profile in recent

The Health Care System

We would like to look more thoroughly at one or two examples of the cost of inadequate preventive health care for women. Twelve thousand women die each year as a result of undetected cervical cancer. The treatment and cure for cervical cancer in its early stages have been known for decades. The pap smear test involves a relatively simple procedure. Yet only an estimated 20 percent of American women have this test each year.

There is also a test you can give yourself, invented by an American and costing twenty-five cents, which was unavailable in the United States in 1967 and had to be imported from Denmark. While conducting a study on these selfadministered tests for cervical cancer, the researchers met with good acceptance but remarked that 53 percent of the women approached had never had a Pap smear.

Even though these simple diagnostic procedures are known. thousands of women have cerical cancer and it goes unnoticed until it has spread to other parts of the body, when it is much less treatable and in many cases fatal. There are many factors contributing to this situation, and we can only point out some of them.

The situation with breast cancer is even more serious, since it kills at almost four times the rate of cervical cancer, and even women who do go for physical exams are not routinely examined for breast abnormalities.

The Power and Role of Male Doctors

Since the 1930 Depression when the incomes of many doctors decreased, the medical profession has practiced what Rick Kunnes has called "professional birth control." The result is that we have fewer doctors per person than we had 75 years ago. This alone might not be such a disaster if doctors were willing, as a profession, to share their skills widely and train paramedical personnel or give more responsibility to nurses for routine procedures. The facts seem to be to the contrary. Instead of sharing its skills, the medical profession used to keep its knowledge restricted, and only during the last 3 decades has it permitted other health workers to assume roles that alleviate the crisis of the doctor shortage. Many cases it is not even a matter of skill but of simple procedures which not only waste the doctor's time, but could often be done by the patient herself.

Another result of this imperialism of knowledge is that many women have not learned enough about their health needs to demand Pap smears or breast self-examinaof other health workers - nurses, for example - have been unnecessarily limited by licensing and tradition. Through its organizational representatives the medical profession has jealously guarded the prerogative of being the exclusive access route for health care by the threat of legal punishment of paramedical people and nurses who practice medicine. For example, lay midwives in Santa Cruz, California, were arrested and charged with practicing medicine without a license in 1974.

The physician is the gatekeeper tion instruction as a public service. This kind of ignorance about our bodies, and particularly those parts related to reproduction and sexuality, is connected with the alienation and shame and fear that have been imposed on us as women. Some people feel that this is an internalization of male valnes, of the male fear and envy of the generative and sexual powers of women.

A doctor has been given unusually broad powers. It is "he" who decides which patients are treated and where; the cost of treatment: who goes to the hospital; which treatment is given and for how long; and which drugs are administered and in what quantities. In fact, all health care has become equated in the public mind with the practice of medicine by physicians. This has enormous implications. One result has been that the roles of the health-care system... not only does he control the entry into the health-care system, but also he provides the only pathway through the system. Other health professionals who might offer great relief or meaningful benefits to the patient may never see her because, from the doctor's perspective, she is not sick or her health needs are not the kind the doctor recognizes or understands. No matter how many other professionals are available, patients must wait until the doctor screens, refers, or "writes orders."

The consequences of this power and control are not simply frustrating for other health workers and for patients. They are the basis for the unusually lucrative income which doctors enjoy. Doctors are still the highest paid of any profession in the United States and many other countries including Iran.

CAIRO: File photo showing Egyptian firemen try to extinguish a fire that erupted in a paper factory in Kalyub (25 km north of Cairo) as a result of heavy sandstorm that struck Cairo. The sandstorm reached speed of 90 km/h killing 12 people and injuring dozens.

Women as Workers in the Health System

The restriction of women in health care to the most menial and lowest-paying status seems to be further evidence of the dominance of male doctors. The financial rewards of being a doctor are high, while the salaries of other health workers, nurses and hospital workers in general - predominately female - have been notoriously low. One nurse told us that, having had several years of experience as an R.N., she went back to school, and after she had received her college degree her salary was increased by about four dollars a

Recent figures show that over 75 percent of the U.S. federal funds allocated for training health workers went for the training of physicians and less than 20 percent for nursing, despite the fact that the average M.D. regularly makes four times the annual earning of a

The fact that nursing has been an overwhelmingly female profession, with little autonomy and molded to serve the needs of the mostly male medical profession, has probably frustrated many talented nurses and deprived the people at large of the benefits of skilled independent nursing care.

Currently feminist voices are being beard in the nursing profession, challenging the traditional subordination of women in the system of male medicine.

nited Nations Arrears

to Be Paid by U.S.

UNITED NATIONS - The Clinon administration is gearing up for a major push to convince the republican-controlled Congress to pay more than $1 billion which Washington owes the United Na-

U.S. Ambassador Bill Richardson, a former congressman, is expected to spearhead the fight, in which the administration hopes to enlist the help of former secretaries of state from the Ronald Reagan and George Bush administrations.

U.S. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the hope is to convince congressional leaders that the arrears issue will threaten American influence within the United Nations.

Meanwhile, the United Nations and its new Secretary-General, Kofi Annan, are seeking ways to convince the American people that the United Nations makes positive contributions to their lives and is worth their tax dollars.

"We should engage civil society as a routine," Annan told executives of the Associated Press during a luncheon last week. "We have to find a way to tell the people how we impact on their lives."

Last February, President Bill Clinton promised Annan that the White House would pay the U.S. arrears. Clinton also encouraged Annan to begin discussions with Sen. Jesse Helms, House speaker Newt Gingrich and other lawmakers who hold the key to paying the Congressional leaders formed a working group to discuss the issue. But last month, congressional Republicans set down conditions which UN and U.S. officials admit would be nearly impossible to meet in full.

These include reducing the U.S. share of both the UN operating budget and the peacekeeping fund from about 25 percent to 20 percent and crediting the United States for money it spends in support of UN operations.

Congress also wants the United Nations to impose more budget restraints and allow the General Accounting Office, a congressional watchdog agency, to check the IJN books.

UN officials insist they have been aggressive in curbing spending and reducing the UN headquarters bureaucracy, last week, the UN financial chief, Joseph Connor, announced proposals that would slash the 1998-1999 budget to $2.583 billion, compared with $2.603 billion for 1996-1997.

But reductions in the percent which Washington must pay would require approval by the 185-member General Assembly. Diplomats from such major U.S. allies as Germany, Japan, and Britain refuse to discuss lowering the U.S. percentages until Washington pays the arrears.

They also want commitment that future bills will be paid in full and on time.

The success of the administration effort may depend largely on the image of Annan, a respected UN insider who won election after the United States vetoed a second term for his predecessor, Boutros Boutros-Ghali.

Washington claimed Boutros-Ghali was laggard in pressing for UN reform. But a U.S. failure to resolve the arrears issue may well undercut Annan's support among the Europeans, Africans and Latin Americans.

They were satisfied with Boutros-Ghali but accepted a change in leadership in hopes a new secretary-general would manage to get Washington to pay its bills.

"I would hope that at the end of my term, we would have a revitalized and energized United Nations," Annan told AP.

But failure to deliver on the arrears will make it difficult for Annan and his U.S. supporters to win general assembly approval for such measures as staff reductions. those are unpopular among developing countries which see the United Nations as a giant employment agency.

During his meeting with AP executives, Annan admitted that the United Nations had failed to convince most Americans that the organization is worth their tax dolars.

He said senior UN officials were "looking at our own public information department," which has often been criticized as bloated and ineffectual.

Annan, who took office last January, cited the work of little known UN agencies which regulate international air traffic, care for refugees, monitor health care standards and supervise the world's telecommunications frequencies.

"Without them, there would be chaos," said.

Albright Scolds Croatia Over Refugees, War Crimes

ZAGREB - U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright scolded Croatia recently for its failure to meet pledges on refugees and war crimes and warned that if it did not exercise "moral" leadership in the region Washington would continue to oppose aid and other benefits.

A grim-faced Croatian President Franjo Tudjman interrupted Albright at a news conference to defend Zagreb's actions. But Albright made clear that keen disagreements remained.
